

You are Invited to attend the

TCLP Virtual Alumni Training Conference 2014

Join the conversation! Meet your friends and colleagues in China and Egypt for a Two-Day Virtual Conference about Student-Centered Teaching

Featuring Presentations and Group Discussions with TCLP alumni:

Ez Eldin Salem (2010)

Achieving Student-Centered Instruction in the Egyptian Classes

This is a presentation about how I benefited from working through the TCLP in the USA schools concerning the best practices of student-centered instruction. The presentation emphasizes the importance of student-centered instruction and frankly reveals the difficulties which teachers face in the Egyptian classes when they want to make their classes student-centered. It also gives solutions and suggestions to overcome these difficulties. The presentation is supported by short video extracts from my classes in Plymouth, USA and Behera, Egypt when I tried to achieve student-centered activities.

Zhang Yong (2012)

Students Like This English Class

Through this presentation, I will show the audience my experience of student-centered teaching in my elementary school in China. First, we will talk about the differences of student-centered teaching between China and the US. Then I will show you how I organize the student-centered teaching in an elementary school class. The teaching plan and the learning materials will give the audience more suggestions and ideas on classroom activities, school based curriculum planning.

Marwa Elgezery (2012)

It's More than a Movie Club: Making the Most of Movies, A Modular Approach

Movies offer an unbeatable combination of real-world language in context and cultural information integrated with text and image. In this session, we will experience how to choose and evaluate films to use as assessments and learning activities in the classroom. We will also learn how to prepare and plan the film unit including choosing a good film, establish the baseline for the unit aligned to learning objectives.

January 14 and January 15, 2014 at 3pm in Egypt and 9pm in China

Presentations will last for 30 minutes and there will be time for discussions after. Sessions will be recorded.

To attend the conference, just follow these links and turn on your speakers:

January 14: <http://ow.ly/sdW5X> Featuring Ez Eldin Salem and Zhang Yong

January 15: <http://ow.ly/sdW1d> Featuring Marwa Elgezery and an Audience Discussion about your successful student-centered teaching approaches in China and Egypt